

Any Way They Can Help

The City of Rockville is a community filled with outstanding volunteers who, without others to boast for them, would ordinarily go unrecognized for their contributions. For the second time, Rockville Reports is featuring a select group of volunteers chosen by the City’s Human Services Advisory Commission for their unparalleled service to the community.

Samuel L. Chapman. A silent partner in the Helping Hands Shelter since its opening 18 years ago, Chapman provides transportation for the shelter staff and clients, solicits funding for the shelter, ensures the shelter is stocked with food, and according to his nomination form, is a “goodwill ambassador in every way.” Even in times of emergency, Chapman, who is now retired from the military and federal government, is available physically and emotionally, reassuring shelter staff members that “everything will be alright.” Aside from the shelter, Chapman spends hours with children and adults in reading programs, serves as an advocate for homeowners in the Rockville area who need help in making their homes safer and more habitable, and has served many years on the board of the Christmas In April program. According to his nomination form, “He is adored by all who know him; he is known throughout the City of Rockville and beyond for his easy-going personality, he has a can-do spirit and million-dollar smile.”

Eldon Durscher. Anyone would be hard-pressed to find Durscher without a paintbrush, hammer or other tool in his hand. Durscher has served as a volunteer building coordinator for the Safe and Habitable Home Project of the Elderly Ministries Program of Community Ministries of Rockville for seven years. A retired architect, Durscher oversees the free construction and repair work done by the program for low- and moderate-income Rockville residents. Durscher and his team have completed a majority of the 378 jobs done for Rockville residents in the last five years, volunteering for more than 800 hours. Elderly Ministries receives letters commenting on Durscher’s work regularly. One recent letter read, “Mr. Durscher is a kind man. He did everything right. Again, I’m so thankful.”

More Than Just a Drop in the Bucket REAPing in the Help: Aide Neighbors in Need Through a Simple ‘Check’ on the Utility Bill

No donation is too small when it comes to an emergency. For years the City of Rockville, in partnership with Community Ministries, has provided emergency assistance to residents through the Rockville Emergency Assistance Program (REAP). The program is coordinated by the Department of Neighborhood and Community Services. Any resident experiencing a legitimate emergency is eligible to apply for the program, which provides up to $750 cash to help alleviate the resident’s emergency. For example, a single father who was facing eviction because of an unexpected illness was able to secure enough emergency assistance to stay at the apartment while he recovered and returned to work. “REAP is not just for low-income residents either,” said Robin Sparer, Rockville’s Youth and Family Services Supervisor. “REAP is available for any resident in need. We all need help at some point in time. REAP is designed to get residents through a difficult time in their lives.” One way residents can contribute to REAP is through the regular utility bill. Located directly on the City’s invoice is a place to indicate how much money the resident

Jan Eisner. A registered nurse, Eisner has been a MobileMed volunteer provider for seven years at the Rockville Senior Center and MobileMed headquarters. Eisner provides patient education, assessments and chronic disease management. Not only does Eisner provide hands-on medical treatment, but also she serves as the volunteer coordinator for MobileMed, which has led to a reorganization of its volunteer services. According to her peers, “Eisner treats each and every patient with dignity and respect. Her connection with patients is obvious to anyone who has ever worked with or observed her. She finds her work rewarding and energizing. She looks forward to many years of helping MobileMed meet the critical and growing health care needs of the medically underserved in Montgomery County.”

Shirley Murphy. Upon first meeting, Murphy’s grace and charm are immediately apparent. A volunteer for the Montgomery Avenue Women’s Center for 20 years, Murphy volunteers directly at the shelter, doing whatever the organization needs at the time, and also acts as the financial secretary. She serves on the Friends Committee (a group that helps with fundraising), shops for needed supplies and fills in on any special request. According to her peers, “Shirley is an inspiration to all those who seek to serve persons in need. She is cheerful about the work that she does, encourages others and finds a way to get the tasks that she accepts completed.”

Friends in Action: (left to right) Back row: Erich Baumgartner, Anthony Rene Sestelli and Darlene Combs. Front: Mary Ann Sestelli and Katie Grant. This team of mentors has worked directly with a Rockville single-parent family of five for more than a year and a half. The mentors helped the mother end an abusive relationship, including helping her to secure a protective order. When the mother was hospitalized, the mentors cared for her four children in their own homes. As this family’s sponsor, the mentors have worked hand-in-hand with each of the children’s four schools to ensure their individualized education plans were maintained. The team also secured summer camp spots for each of the four children, and have helped the mother, who was diagnosed with diabetes, with a variety of medical needs.

Alfred Thompson of the Department of Neighborhood and Community Services is one of the City employees who helps with the distribution of REAP benefits to individuals and families.

Want to Help?

Check out the Web sites for the Caregiver agencies listed in this insert for interesting ideas about how to donate your time. Anyone with a professional skill or an area of expertise could easily find opportunities to volunteer—and you might just change someone’s life. Providing printing services, business consulting, graphic art talents and tax preparation expertise are just a few examples of ways volunteers can help. With just a few extra hours to spare, you could be the person to make a lasting difference in your community. Call Mary Lou Jacobs at 240-314-8310 for additional information. ■

Rockville’s Caregiving Agencies

Unique Ways of Giving

This special insert of “Rockville Reports” highlights many local “Caregiver” agencies, focusing on just a few of the many programs and services that support members of our community. There is contact information provided for individual programs, services or centers throughout the “Caregivers” insert, but for general information, contact the City’s Department of Neighborhood and Community Services’ Youth and Family Services Division at 240-314-8310, or stop by their offices at 20 Courthouse Square, Suite # 205 in downtown Rockville.

Unique Ways of Giving

Each year in the Caregivers insert of Rockville Reports, the City of Rockville highlights a variety of organizations, groups and individuals that selflessly donate their time and effort to assist those in the community. This year’s insert features corporate and individual Caregivers that have extended their assistance in more creative ways — unique ways of giving. These unique gifts range from donations of transportation for community groups, to assisting in the organization of focus groups for new health care initiatives, to allotting for the hiring of personnel in business settings for those who may otherwise not have gainful employment opportunities. With the holiday season in full swing, people may wonder how they, too, can help those less fortunate. Often, financial support is the only area emphasized with talk of “charity,” but there are significant contributions that can be made at little to no cost to the giver. This issue of Rockville Reports features some creative gifts of services, equipment and other donations that could equally benefit those in need. The list below highlights some creative gifts that local Caregiver agencies have received, and others that remain on their wish list.

Unique Gifts: Charities Express Their Organizational Needs

Korean Community Service Center
A unique gift already received... College students from Catholic University always participate in the Korean Community Service Center health fairs by assisting volunteer doctors and participants who are uninsured.
Some unique gifts they hope to receive... Donate more than 10 hours per month for one year, mentor isolated seniors and victims of domestic violence. For those with graphic arts experience: create flyers on health, public welfare and immigration-related issues.

Elderly and Disabilities Ministries
A unique gift already received... A volunteer calls clients weekly to talk with them and check their satisfaction with the homemaker service. The volunteer and her husband also threw a Valentine’s Day Dinner Party for clients. He provided transportation and she made the food, even serving some of the clients’ favorite recipes.

Sophia House
A unique gift they hope to receive... This shelter for homeless women would welcome donations of new women’s underwear.

Horizon House
A unique gift they hope to receive... This program that provides case management support to men and women seeks a volunteer to provide art therapy and one that could help with budget counseling.

Rainbow Place
A unique gift they hope to receive... The shelter that provides shelter for homeless women during winter months would appreciate the gift of a subscription to cable TV. It would help make cold nights easier.

Community Ministries of Rockville Shelters
A unique gift they hope to receive... The Community Ministries of Rockville shelters aim to help men and women improve their lives through educational opportunities. Tuition and books that would enable residents to take a class at Montgomery College or another institution for higher learning would be a cherished gift.

Montgomery Avenue Women’s Center
A unique gift they hope to receive... A freezer, or funds to buy one, would be a hot contribution.

Latino Outreach Program
A unique gift they hope to receive... Children’s books, crayons, coloring books and other children’s supplies – new or in good condition – are coveted donations.

Dorothy Day Place
A unique gift already received... The transition residence for women is grateful for a gift that helped renovate the house.
A unique gift they hope to receive... A 12-passenger van to transport the ladies to activities, such as retreats that they attend throughout the year.

Helping Hands
A unique gift they hope to receive... The year-round emergency shelter for women and their children would like two metal park benches for parents to sit and watch their children in the playground area.

Thanks to the generous support of Capital Technology Information Services, Inc., (CTIS), located in Rockville, Margarita Valerio (above, right) received preliminary healthcare that indicated a serious health condition that since is being treated. CTIS was one of the driving forces with Community Ministries of Rockville, Inc., that led to “Hummy,” a mobile health clinic for those with no health insurance.

Face of Giving

Rockville resident Margarita Valerio had been experiencing extraordinary stomach pains and terrible backaches for years. With no health insurance, however, Valerio, a mother of one, usually suffered through the pain, simply because there was no other option. One day less than a year ago the pain was so intense Valerio had to visit the emergency room. Without further testing, though, the hospital could not determine what was wrong. Valerio continued to deal with the pain. Meanwhile, elsewhere in the City, Capital Technology Information Services, Inc., a Rockville-based information technology company with a focus on health and patients’ well-being, and Community Ministries of Rockville, Inc., were in the process of developing a new healthcare initiative with MobileMed. CTIS CEO Raj Shah, who was recently recognized as a Community Ministries Business Leader of the Year for CTIS’s efforts in the greater Rockville Community, and Mansfield Kaseman, executive director of Community Ministries, had discussed ways their respective organizations could combine resources to help those underserved in the area. CTIS, which is no stranger in giving to the Rockville community, helped organize six focus groups to identify healthcare needs among those uninsured in the county. One critical area identified was the desperate need for translation services for the underprivileged when receiving healthcare. Community Ministries identified a viable solution through its Latino Outreach Program, which teaches English to the Latino community. Since many of its members also are uninsured residents, Community Ministries and CTIS identified the perfect population for a new initiative with MobileMed - a new traveling medical “Hummy,” pictured above, is a new MobileMed clinic that services many Rockville residents. Pictured with Hummy (from left to right) is Sabina Orellana (Patient Coordinator), Mansfield Kaseman (Executive Director), Agnes Saenz (Managing Director) of Community Ministries and Connie Dalton Ezerski (Executive Administrator) of CTIS. Valerio was one of Hummy’s first visitors. After a preliminary check-up with a Hummy healthcare provider, Valerio was referred to Suburban Hospital for more tests that would be conducted at no charge to her. Tests revealed that Valerio needed surgery to remove gall stones. A local surgeon donated his time to perform the much-needed surgery. Some four months later Valerio said she’s almost feeling like new. And she is one of the many patients who are thankful a local company and a community organization found a unique way to contribute. ■
